

GP Emergencies

When a crisis occurs, working within a team is critical so therefore training together makes sense. The GP Emergencies course enables the multidisciplinary team to train together, developing skills required to recognise and care for acutely ill patients.

Using manikins and simulation based education this course aims to develop confidence and competence in recognising and assessing potentially sick patients, focusing on the systematic approach, and the development of crisis management skills, communication, teamwork and leadership skills within the multidisciplinary team.

The course usually runs over half a day.
